Muir was very good friends with the famous Native American activist, Charles Lummis. In 1902 Lummis formed one of California's earliest Native American rights group called "The Sequoya League". The organization was dedicated to protecting Indian rights as well as to fight for "the betterment of Indian conditions". Alongside the many leading experts on Native American Advocacy and the West that Lummis enlisted onto the organization’s Board of Directors & Advisory Board, Muir himself joined the Sequoya League, sending in generous donations and dues for both himself and his daughter Helen.

An early effort of the League led to Lummis finding a home with suitable irrigation for farming for a small group of Indians who had been evicted by a rancher in the Palm Springs, California area. The organization fought vigorously in protecting Indian rights, opposing the federal policy that permitted federal Bureau of Indian Affairs officials to remove Indian children from their reservations and send them to far-away boarding schools against the wishes of their parents. These practices cut off hundreds of children from their families, and even prevented from returning home even during summer vacations. Lummis came to regard the U.S. government's Indian education policies as an abomination.

The Sequoya League later battled against Indian Agent Charles Burton, accusing him of imposing a "reign of terror" on the Hopi pueblo in Oraibi by forcibly requiring Hopi men to cut their long hair. The League further opposed policies the Office of Indian Affairs attempted to enact prohibiting Native Americans from "wearing Indian costume and blanket" and from engaging in "Indian dances and so-called Indian feasts."

There are many letters between Muir & Lummis that reveal their deep friendship and Muir’s steadfast support in assisting in Lummis’ work and efforts. Here are just a few where they’re working together in connection with the Sequoya League.
Martinez, March 15, 1902

My dear Lummis,

These are ten dollars from you from Indians, I feel sure they love you. Brotherly will be done for them. You know how vital it is for little outdoor work! Each word of sympathy means something real to them.

Many thanks. Remember me to the wildfowlers. Believe in every sincere yours,

John Muir

Dear Mr. Lummis:-

Please find enclosed four dollars for my own use and a yearly subscription for Helen Muir who wishes to become a member of The Sequoia League.

Thanking you for the noble work you are doing for our unfortunate fellowmortals, and wishing you Godspeed I am faithfully yours,

John Muir

Dear Muir:

It is a great pleasure to have your faithful co-operation in the work we are trying to do; and I thank you heartily for it. It is mighty nice too, to have Helen take membership in the Sequoia League. I enclose receipt.

You will be glad to know that the work is going ahead at least as fast as we have any right to expect. Congress is always slow and stupid; and it has knocked out the appropriation for a commission. But I think that Commissioner Leupp who is a good man, will stop here to visit the worst of the reservations with me in June; and Senator Flint has promised to do the same. I suppose that we shall have to feed these Indians again next winter; but our people will, I am sure, glad-
